For the anecdote...

A « coupé en deux » (« cut in two ») is the nickname of the Wattrelos inhabitants.

This nickname comes from the last century, where many inhabitants lived in former stables which doors were made so that horses could get their head out of the stables.

These half opened stables doors gave the impression to people that the new inhabitants were... cut in two !

In reference to this anecdote, the Damier Club de Wattrelos decided to innovate with a new kind of tournament, involving teams of two, by doubling the time controls and the games per round.
